MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR ADDITIONAL TIME TO RESPOND TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION TO REMAND FOR THE PURPOSE OF CONDUCTING REMAND-RELATED DISCOVERY

COME NOW Defendants American General Financial Services of Alabama, Inc. (improperly designated as American General Finance Inc. in the complaint), as successor to American General Finance, Inc., Merit Life Insurance Company, Yosemite Insurance Company, Kathie Rowell, and Connie Farmer (hereinafter collectively referred to as "Defendants"), by and through their undersigned counsel, appearing specially so as to preserve any and all defenses available under Rule 12 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and specifically preserving the right to seek arbitration pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. §§ 1, et seq., and hereby submit this memorandum of law in support of their Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to Plaintiffs' Motion to Remand for the Purpose of Conducting Remand-Related Discovery. In support of their motion, Defendants show unto the Court the following:

I. INTRODUCTION

On or about July 7, 2005, Plaintiffs commenced the present action by filing a complaint against Defendants in the Circuit Court of Macon County, Alabama, CV-05-136. It is of the type referred to by the plaintiffs' bar as a "flipping and packing" case, alleging certain putative misconduct with respect to the refinancing of consumer loans and the sale of credit life, disability and/or property insurance in connection with those loans. Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that the Defendants misrepresented the optional nature of credit insurance and the financial benefits of refinancing and consolidating prior debt with respect to several loans they obtained in 1995.

This lawsuit is one of a number of boilerplate identical consumer finance suits recently filed by Plaintiffs' counsel, including ten in Alabama and twelve in Tennessee.¹ These

In the present action, Plaintiffs advance a variety of vague allegations designed to defeat Defendants' valid fraudulent joinder argument. (See Plaintiffs' Complaint, ¶¶ 13-23). Specifically, Plaintiffs assert in their Complaint that the non-diverse Defendants misrepresented that credit insurance was a "good deal" and that purchasing such insurance would improve their chances of being approved for the loan in question. (Plaintiffs' Complaint, ¶¶ 13, 16). Moreover, Plaintiffs allege that the non-diverse Defendants misrepresented to them that refinancing and consolidating prior debt would save them money. (Plaintiffs' Complaint, ¶ 15). Based on these allegations, Plaintiffs appear to assert the following individual causes of action with respect to loans they obtained approximately ten years ago: (1) fraudulent misrepresentation and/or concealment; (2) negligent misrepresentation; (3) negligent and/or wanton hiring, training, and supervision; and (4) breach of fiduciary duties.

On or about August 8, 2005, Defendants removed the present action to this Court on diversity jurisdiction grounds under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a). Defendants specifically demonstrated in their Notice of Removal that diversity jurisdiction exists in the present action because the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000 and because Kathie Rowell and Connie Farmer, the only non-diverse Defendants, have been fraudulently joined.

On or about September 6, 2005, Plaintiffs filed a Motion to Remand arguing against the existence of diversity jurisdiction. Defendants' response to Plaintiffs' Motion to Remand is due September 12, 2005.

Life Ins. Co., 148 F. Supp. 2d 734 (S.D. Miss. 2001).

II. ARGUMENT

Defendants request additional time to respond to Plaintiffs' Motion to Remand for the purpose of conducting remand-related discovery. As demonstrated in detail below, such discovery is necessary in order for Defendants to submit a fully informed response to Plaintiffs' Motion to Remand. Indeed, absent discovery, it is difficult to ascertain the alleged facts supporting Plaintiffs' claims, for the allegations in the Complaint are left intentionally vague, which Plaintiffs undoubtedly hope will save their Complaint from a finding that there is no possibility of recovery against the non-diverse Defendants, thereby avoiding the proper exercise of this Court's diversity jurisdiction.

Moreover, Defendants require discovery to procure a copy of Plaintiffs' 1995 loan documents to determine if Plaintiff even obtained a loan in 1995. To date, Defendants have been unable, despite much effort, to acquire a copy of said documents. Defendants, however, have reason to believe that these loan documents, if they exist, and the disclosures therein prove that Plaintiffs have no possible cause of action against Kathie Rowell and Connie Farmer and, accordingly, that said Defendants have been fraudulently joined.

Similarly, remand-related discovery is needed for Defendants to conclusively prove that Plaintiffs' claim for damages exceeds $75,000 and, accordingly, that the jurisdictional amount in controversy requirement has been satisfied. For these reasons and others, Defendant's Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to Plaintiffs' Motion to Remand for the Purpose of Conducting Remand-Related Discovery is due to be granted.

A. Defendants Need to Conduct Remand-Related Discovery in Order to Properly Address the Issue of Fraudulent Joinder.

As demonstrated above and in their Notice of Removal, Defendants contend that there is complete diversity among the parties in the present action because Kathie Rowell and Connie Farmer, the only non-diverse Defendants, have been fraudulently joined. See Bullock v. United Benefit Ins. Co., 165 F. Supp. 2d 1255, 1256 (M.D. Ala. 2001) (“When a defendant has been fraudulently joined, the court should disregard his or her citizenship for purposes of determining whether a case is removable based upon diversity jurisdiction.”). Fraudulent joinder exists where “there is no possibility that the Plaintiff can prove a cause of action against the resident (non-diverse) defendant.” Fowler v. Provident Life and Accident Insurance Co., 256 F. Supp. 2d 1243, 1246 (N.D. Ala. 2003) (citing Triggs v. John Crump Toyota, Inc., 154 F.3d 1284, 1287 (11th Cir. 1998)). Plaintiffs cannot possibly prove a cause of action against Kathie Rowell and Connie Farmer because their claims against said Defendants, which relate to alleged loans that are ten years old, are both time-barred on their face by the applicable statute of limitations and fail as a matter of law. Defendants, however, need to conduct remand-related discovery in order to substantiate these contentions and demonstrate that the non-diverse Defendants have been fraudulently joined in the present action.

1. Defendants Need to Conduct Remand-Related Discovery in Order to Demonstrate that Plaintiffs’ Claims Against the Non-Diverse Defendants are Time-Barred by the Statute of Limitations.

Federal courts in Alabama have repeatedly found fraudulent joinder, and denied motions to remand, in virtually identical cases where the applicable statute of limitations bars all claims against a non-diverse defendant. See Owens v. Life Ins. Co. of Georgia, 289 F. Supp. 2d 1319 (M.D. Ala. 2003); Fowler v. Provident Life and Accident Insurance Co., 256 F. Supp. 2d 1243 (N.D. Ala. 2003); Bullock v. United Benefit Ins. Co., 165 F. Supp. 2d 1255 (M.D. Ala. 2001); Wakeland v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 996 F. Supp. 1213 (S.D. Ala. 1998).

In Owens, the most recent of these decisions, and a case remarkably similar to that at hand, the plaintiff brought an action in 2003 against an insurance company and a non-diverse individual defendant based upon alleged misrepresentations and/or omissions made by the individual defendant, as agent for the insurance company, with respect to a life insurance policy purchased in 1984. Owens, 289 F.Supp.2d at 1321. In conjunction with these allegations, the plaintiff asserted claims for breach of contract, fraud, and fraudulent suppression against both defendants. Id. The defendants subsequently removed the case, arguing that complete diversity existed by virtue of the individual defendant's fraudulent joinder. Id. at 1321-23.

In addressing the propriety of removal, Judge Fuller found that the plaintiff was provided with documentation in 1984 that both contradicted the alleged oral misrepresentations and provided the information allegedly suppressed. Id. at 1326. Accordingly, the Court concluded that the plaintiff "should have discovered the possibility of fraud and misrepresentation in 1984 when he purchased the Policy, and the two year statute of limitations commenced running at that time." Id. Plaintiff's claims against the individual defendant were, therefore, found to be barred by the two year statute of limitations. Id. Because the statute of limitations precluded any possibility of establishing a cause of action against the individual defendant, the Court held that said defendant was, in fact, fraudulently joined and denied the plaintiff's motion to remand. Id.

As demonstrated above, fraud claims in the consumer finance context accrue, and the applicable statute of limitations begins to run, when the borrower receives documents putting him or her on notice of the alleged fraud. See id.; Ex parte American General Finance, Inc., 795 So. 2d 685, 689-91 (Ala. 2000) ("fraud is discoverable as a matter of law for purposes of the statute of limitations when one receives documents that would put one on such notice that the fraud reasonably should be discovered."). As such, the operative issue in any statute of limitations inquiry in the consumer fraud context, including the present action, is whether the plaintiff received documents that put him or her on notice of the alleged fraud, i.e., documents that contradicted the alleged misrepresentations and/or provided the information alleged suppressed. See id. As mentioned above, however, Defendants do not currently possess a copy of Plaintiffs' 1995 loan documents, if said documents do, in fact, exist. Given the above precedent, it is clear that Defendants must conduct discovery (a) to determine whether Plaintiffs even obtained a loan in 1995 from Defendants; (b) to demonstrate that the loan documents from any such loan put Plaintiffs on notice of the claims asserted; (c) to demonstrate that Plaintiffs received a copy of the loan documents in question; and (d) to ultimately demonstrate that Plaintiffs' claims against the non-diverse defendants are time-barred by the applicable statute of limitations. Accordingly, this Court should grant Defendants additional time to conduct the necessary discovery regarding Plaintiffs' alleged 1995 loan(s).

2. Defendants Need to Conduct Remand-Related Discovery in Order to Demonstrate that Plaintiffs' Claims Against the Non-Diverse Defendants Fail as a Matter of Law.

Fraudulent joinder also exists where claims against a non-diverse defendant fail as a matter of law. See Bullock v. United Benefit Ins. Co., 165 F.Supp.2d 1255 (M.D. Ala. 2001) (finding fraudulent joinder with respect to a breach of contract claim against a non-diverse defendant where said defendant was not a party to the contract in question); see also Levitt v. Independent Life And Acc. Ins. Co., 814 F. Supp. 1053 (M.D. Ala. 1993). With that said, Defendants contend that Plaintiffs have no possible cause of action against Kathie Rowell and/or Connie Farmer on the alleged loans at issue. Remand-Related discovery is needed, however, to fully develop these fraudulent joinder arguments and conclusively prove that Plaintiffs' claims against these non-diverse Defendants fail as a matter of law.

a. Defendants Need Additional Time To Conduct Discovery To Determine The Level of Plaintiffs' Contact, If Any, With The Non-Diverse Defendants.

First and foremost, Defendants need additional time to determine the level of Plaintiffs' contacts, if any, with Kathie Rowell and/or Connie Farmer on the loans at issue. As mentioned above, Defendants do not possess any documentation reflecting a loan obtained by Plaintiffs in 1995. As such, it is possible that Plaintiffs never even dealt with these Kathie Rowell and/or Connie Farmer regarding the loans at issue and that they are precluded from asserting a cause of action against said Defendants. Discovery is needed, however, to definitively determine the level of Plaintiffs' contacts, if any, with these non-diverse Defendants. Given the significance of this determination, this Court should grant Defendants additional time to conduct the necessary discovery.

b. Defendants Need Additional Time to Conduct Discovery Regarding Whether Plaintiff "Reasonably Relied" on Defendants' Alleged Misrepresentations.

In addition, Defendants need additional time to conduct discovery regarding whether Plaintiffs "reasonably relied" on Defendants' alleged misrepresentations. The Alabama Supreme Court has specifically held that recovery under a fraud theory requires a showing that the plaintiff "reasonably relied" on the alleged misrepresentations. See Foremost Ins. Co. v. Massey, 693 So.2d 409, 421 (Ala. 1997). "If the circumstances are such that a reasonably prudent person who exercised ordinary care would have discovered the true facts," then the plaintiffs' reliance on the alleged misrepresentations was not reasonable, and "the plaintiffs should not recover." Massey Automotive, Inc. v. Norris, 895 So.2d 215, 220 (Ala. 2004) (quoting Torres v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 438 So.2d 757, 759 (Ala. 1983)). Specifically, "reliance can be declared unreasonable, as a matter of law, 'where the undisputed evidence indicates that the party or parties claiming fraud in a particular transaction were fully capable of reading and understanding their documents, but nonetheless made a deliberate decision to ignore written contract terms' that clearly contradicted the alleged misrepresentations." Massey Automotive, 895 So.2d at 220 (quoting Foremost, 693 So.2d at 421) (emphasis added).

The foregoing principles are best illustrated by the Alabama Supreme Court's recent decision in Liberty National Life Ins. Co. v. Ingram, 887 So.2d 222 (Ala. 2004). In Ingram, the plaintiff sued the defendant insurer for fraud based on allegations that said insurer told him that his policy would be paid up after 10 years. Id. at 223. In actuality, premiums on the policy at issue were payable for the entire life of the policy. Id. at 228. The plaintiff's policy clearly disclosed this fact, but the plaintiff admitted that he failed to read said policy. Id. Because the plaintiff received, but failed to read, documents clearly contradicting the alleged misrepresentations, the Court held that "[he] did not reasonably rely on [the insurer's] representation." Id. at 229. Accordingly, the Court concluded that the plaintiff had no cause of action in fraud against the defendant and entered summary judgment in the case. Id. at 229-30.

As with the statute of limitations analysis, this reasonable reliance inquiry hinges on whether the Plaintiffs received documents contradicting the alleged misrepresentations and/or providing the information alleged suppressed. As demonstrated earlier, Defendants do not currently possess a copy of Plaintiffs' 1995 loan documents, if said documents do, in fact, exist. Defendants have reason to believe, however, that such documents, if they exist, contradict at least some, if not all, of the alleged misrepresentations in the present action. As such, it is clear that Defendants must conduct discovery (a) to determine whether Plaintiffs even obtained a loan in 1995 from Defendants; (b) to demonstrate that the loan documents from any such loan contradicted the alleged misrepresentations and/or provided the information alleged suppressed; (c) to demonstrate that Plaintiffs received a copy of the loan documents in question; and (d) to ultimately demonstrate that Plaintiffs could not have reasonably relied on Defendants' alleged misrepresentations for purposes of asserting a cause of action in fraud. Accordingly, this Court should grant Defendants additional time to conduct the necessary discovery regarding Plaintiffs' alleged 1995 loan(s).

B. Defendants Need to Conduct Remand-Related Discovery in Order to Properly Address the Amount in Controversy Issue.

Defendants also need to conduct remand-related discovery in order to properly address the issue of the amount in controversy. Plaintiffs allege in their complaint that they have endured monetary injuries, that "they have suffered mental anguish and emotional distress; and ha[ve] otherwise been injured and damaged." (See Plaintiff's Complaint, at ¶ 27). Based on these alleged injuries, Plaintiffs seek a "judgment against Defendants in such an amount of compensatory and punitive damages as a jury deems reasonable and may award, plus costs." (Id.)

Because Plaintiffs have asked for an unspecified amount of damages, Defendants are only required to show that "the amount in controversy more likely than not exceeds the jurisdictional requirement." Tapscott v. MS Dealer Serv. Corp., 77 F.3d 1353, 1357 (11th Cir. 1996). Defendants, however, need to conduct discovery concerning the extent of Plaintiffs' vague injuries and the damages sought as a result thereof in order to conclusively demonstrate that "the amount in controversy more likely than not exceeds the jurisdictional requirement." Tapscott, 77 F.3d at 1357. Specifically, Defendants need to assess the magnitude of Plaintiffs' alleged emotional/mental injuries and monetary damages. If permitted to do so, Defendants contend that plaintiffs with similar claims have sought damages in excess of $75,000. Moreover, Plaintiffs should not be protected by an unspecified claim for damages. Rather, Defendants should be allowed to conduct discovery as to the amount of damages sought in the present action and whether Plaintiffs would decline an award in excess of $75,000. If permitted to do so, Defendants contend that they will be able to affirmatively demonstrate that Plaintiffs actually seek damages in excess of the jurisdictional amount. Based on the foregoing, this Court should grant Defendants additional time to conduct remand-related discovery regarding the amount in controversy requirement.

III. CONCLUSION

As demonstrated above, Defendants need to conduct remand-related discovery to definitively demonstrate that the non-diverse Defendants in the present action have been fraudulently joined and that the amount in controversy requirement has been satisfied. As previously stated, federal courts in Mississippi, which have addressed this very issue in similar lawsuits on numerous occasions, have permitted such discovery, and it has proven quite effective in weeding-out fraudulent claims against non-diverse defendants. Accordingly, this Court should follow this Mississippi precedent and grant Defendants Motion for an Extension of Time to Respond to Plaintiffs' Motion to Remand for the Purpose of Conducting Remand-Related Discovery.
